

The High Consequences of Gaza War: A Burden That the Occupying Entity Cannot Bear

Talal Abu-Ghazaleh

The veil of Zionist lies and deception is falling apart day by day due to the high cost of its brutal war on the Gaza Strip, as the human and economic losses are not just statistics; rather an indication of a deep pathological condition at the roots of the illegitimate entity.

While the occupation continues its heinous crimes against the resilient people in Gaza, astonishing figures are emerging that will inevitably deepen the existing divisions and splits within the entity. Perhaps these realities are the main reason for Netanyahu's insistence on prolonging the aggression, disregarding international calls and initiatives, and pressure from the Zionist Street, especially with the growing public skepticism about Israeli army's reports on human losses. Hospital records reveal that the number of casualties has exceeded 20,000.

On the economic front, the costs are nothing short of overwhelming, God's willing, as data from the Bank of Israel and the Israeli Ministry of Finance showed that the cost of the war from October 7th until the end of March has amounted to more than 73 billion dollars.

The Zionists will wake up to the reality that the war they applauded will turn into regret when they discover that it has consumed their sons and their wealth, and that the entire world no longer believes in Zionist myths, as calls for accountability increase, especially after decisions by the International Court of Justice and the International Criminal Court. Perhaps increasing isolation, sanctions, and trade restrictions await the entity, exacerbating its humanitarian, social, and existential crises.

As costs continue to rise - both human and economic - the question arises: how long can the entity sustain this situation? The burden on its soldiers, the strain on its economy, and the growing societal divisions suggest that they are facing a new scenario in which these elements could combine to lead to a civil war. This is why President Biden and his administration have been increasingly concerned about what is happening, which has been expressed on more than one occasion, the latest of which was his remarks to Time magazine in which he announced a ceasefire proposal.

The Zionists must realize, and everyone must realize, that the blood of the martyrs in Gaza is a stark reminder that military oppression has rebounded on them with disasters and tragedies, and that hatred and killing have dragged them into a deadly game.
